QUESTION 30

An organization ran a test with Adobe Analytics as a reporting source. The activity design further enhances a very popular filtering feature on their site. When carrying out an early analysis of the results, they noticed that it is not performing as well as expected.

What should they do to determine if this is due to novelty effect?

- * Find a metric that is impacted positively by the change, and make this the primary metric.
- * Segment the results by new and returning visitors, and compare their usage.
- * Alter the traffic distribution to reduce the volume of traffic to the underperforming experience.

QUESTION 31

When running a test the marketing manager sees that the test has reached a confidence level of 87% and has a 4.2% lift. Excited for the success, the manager wants to stop the test, accept the results, and move on to a new test.

What advice should be given to the manager about ending the test at this point?

- * Let the test run because there is sufficient evidence that there is a difference in conversion.
- * Let the test run because there is weak evidence that there is a difference in rates.
- * Stop the test because there is strong evidence that there is a difference in conversion.

QUESTION 32

A marketer has a number of alternative image assets available and they would like to use machine learning to decide the most appropriate image to deliver to each individual visitor, based on real-time behavioral data.
