- * A demonstration of functionality completed in the Sprint
- * An inspection of the work completed by the Developers in the Sprint

Q94. Conducting small experiments to validate concepts with customers provides valuable insights into the potential value of proposed solutions. However, the financial department at ABC company feels that the experiments are not cost-effective.

What is the appropriate response to the finance department? (choose the best answer)

- * Experiments are only required in very limited circumstances as reviews by stakeholders can often achieve the same or better results.
- * Experiments should not be run on products that are already launched because experiments are only effective for new products.
- * Proposed solutions are likely to succeed as they are based on market research.
- * It is more cost-effective to allocate a small sum of money to validate a solution than to create a solution that does not meet the customer's actual needs.

Q95. Conduct an experiment could help the Product Owner to : (select ALL that apply)

- * Make precise decision on investment
- * Understand if a product's product/market fit and business viability

Q100. Team Tigers completed 40 points of work in two weeks. Team Lions completed 20 points of work in one week.

Which team delivered more value? (choose the best answer)

- * The amount of work completed is a measure of effort, not the delivered value.
- * Team Tigers, since they finished more units of work.

Q101. Your organization requires all Increments to pass user acceptance testing (UAT) before it is allowed to be released to production.

Is it a good idea to postpone UAT until the end of the project to prevent the Developers from being disrupted during the Sprints? (choose the best answer)

- * Yes, because UAT is done in a hardening Sprint before the release Sprint.
- * No, because the state of the Product Increment won't be transparent and the feedback loop would be too long.
- * It depends on the team's Definition of Done.

* Yes, because the Developers is a self-organizing team and should not be disrupted during development.
